I've also been wondering if we should ask for step draw-down tests or an actual pump test in the CZ, due to the paucity of hydraulic information for that unit (i.e., to improve future models). We can discuss when we next talk.

I'm available this afternoon if EPA/ADEQ approve Eleanor's request for a focused team discussion to improve this checklist.

Fantastic – thanks! And yes, I'm sure the row heights, etc. will be changing as comments are added/removed I appreciate it, though!

Happy Friday, everyone!

I edited the text about monitoring wells to incorporate Doug's and Bo's comments and then deleted the comments. I tried using the track changes feature, but I'm not certain it worked. The only other thing is change a the height of some rows so that the comments/entries could be read.

Eleanor,

Attached is an edited version with comments by Bo, Dan, and myself (my comments/edits in blue). Hopefully we're moving in an "improved" direction. Good luck following this.

A few added thoughts.

Sorry for all the colors and borders. It's easier for my eyes to follow if there's lots of demarcation!

Hi Eleanor,

I tracked changes and also highlighted changed cells with light brown.

Good evening/afternoon, All,

Attached is the EBR checklist for you all to look over and comment on. In case somebody has not done Track Changes in Excel (I don't know too many who have), the first worksheet includes some instructions I wrote out to make it easy to do.

Thanks,
Eleanor
